A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT, Dick Pippen, rpippen@comcast.net

Greetings Orchid Lovers—Mac Rivenbark of Mac's Orchids, Ft. Lauderdale, the featured speaker at our September meeting did not disappoint. Mac is always an entertaining and informative speaker. This month he told us about putting "the right plant in the right place" to get the best growth and best flowering. Now, all we have to do is hope that we have the same success with our plants that he does!

As I write this letter, a few days before the sun makes its trek back south of the Tropic of Cancer and introduces "Fall" to many parts of the country, it is hard to realize that another season approaches, especially since we are still "sweltering" in 90+ degree temperatures that feel like over 100! Thank goodness most of the orchids we grow here thrive in tropical climes!! I hope all your orchids are surviving all the rain we have been getting as well as the hot temperatures.

This is also an exciting time of year because we will begin to welcome back some of our winter residents. And before you know it, Culture Class and Show Time will be here. Speaking of the latter, we need to begin thinking about a theme for the 2019 Orchid Show. I will have the "theme box" at both our October and November meetings, so you can put in your suggestions. Remember the winner of the chosen theme will receive a $50 prize.

Our October meeting should be another good one. Alan Koch, Gold Country Orchids from California, will be our featured speaker. We have had the privilege of Alan as a speaker several times now and he never disappoints. He is an excellent speaker, knowledgeable grower and hybridizer, and should have some very interesting plants to sell. Hope all of you will be able to attend. Until then . . . keep your orchids happy. Dick

ROOT ROT – (Fusarium oxysporum & Rhizoctonia solani)

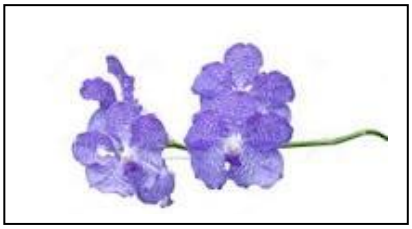
From "Growing Orchids is Fun" by Better-Gro

Wet potting medium is the culprit for root rot. Whether over watering, poor ventilation, or the use of decorative containers with poor or no drainage, constantly wet conditions result in root rot. Foliage turns yellow & wrinkled, which are symptoms of dehydration. Rotten roots cannot take up water, of course. Problems may move up into the rhizome & pseudobulbs of infected plants. Often the best solution is to remove the infected plant from its pot & trim off all dead roots. Re-pot the plant in fresh medium & a clean pot. This is an instance where it is critical to size the pot in proportion to the remaining root mass, often resulting in the need for what appears to be a very small pot for the size of the plant. Under such conditions the plant will re-establish best & can be potted up once the pot is filled with roots.
Seriously infected plants exhibit a purple ring in the outer layers of the rhizome & a pink to purple color in the inner conductive tissue. Toxic substances produced by the fungus plug vascular tissue & prevent water transport within the plant causing it to wilt. Drench plants with fungicide containing benomyl if available. Water sparingly until new roots appear.



From Your AOS Rep, Marilyn Moser

mm3purple@aol.com

I have been doing regular culling…weeding out the orchids that don't seem to be doing very well. If they are halfway decent, I place them in my side yard and every once in a while I get a nice surprise. A lovely pink Cattleya bloomed so I enjoyed it while looking out my kitchen window.
Here are a couple of helpful hints: turn your orchids occasionally to keep them from becoming lopsided. However, once they are in spike do not turn them or change their position in any way as the flowers will not present well. This is especially true of Phalaenopsis.
If you feel your plant is receiving too much light or sun, feel the leaves. If they are warmer than the surrounding air, reduce the light intensity.
Remember that you can join the American Orchid Society on line at AOS.org. A one year membership is $65 and you get 12 monthly issues of Orchids magazine, access to a members only website and reciprocal benefits at over 200 botanical gardens nationwide.

An Orchid Vignette—Ctsm. Jamie Lawson XOXO—Is this a Tic-Tac-Toe Plant?

I have called Catasetums "Orchids for the Connoisseur" because they are somewhat unusual for an orchid, often require some special treatments and they are often quite large plants. Catasetums have thick pseudobulbs that may reach a foot or more in length and two to three inches in diameter. They produce, at the tip, several thin, prominently-veined leaves that may reach a foot or more in length and three or so inches across. A prominent feature of Catasetums is that they have a distinct dormant period, usually from November to January or February, and during this time their leaves turn yellow and fall off. No, or very little, water should be given to these plants during their dormant period. Once new pseudobulbs have begun to form and the new roots are about 3 inches long, then watering and fertilizing should begin again. Another distinguishing feature of Catasetums is that they have separate male and female flowers. Light appears to be a major factor in whether the plants produce male or female flowers. The male flowers (the more attractive flowers) are produced in less light, the female flowers (mostly green and hooded, "less attractive") in more light. The male flowers are noted for explosively releasing their pollen masses (pollinia) onto unsuspecting pollinating bees.

One of my fairly recent acquisitions, that has rapidly become one of my favorites, is Ctsm. Jamie Lawson XOXO—yes, XOXO is part of the grex name and not a cultivar designation. Not sure what Mr. Lawson had in mind when he named it. Ctsm. Jamie Lawson XOXO is a cross between Ctsm. pileatum and Ctsm. John C. Burchett. This hybrid was created by Fred Clarke (Sun Valley Orchids, CA) and registered by James Lawson of Palm Bay, FL in 2014. It has earned seven awards (including an AM to 'Lydia' belonging to Ralph Brand) and is a parent in one cross. Both of these parents have quite variable male flower-color, and such is the case with XOXO. My plant produces "pale-colored" male flowers, whereas some of the photos of this hybrid in OrchidWiz have very deep burgundy flowers. Another interesting feature of XOXO, at least in my plant, is that it produces both male and female flowers at the same time!! In the same light conditions!! In the photo (left) the male flowers are hanging down over the pot, whereas the green female flowers are on an upright spike. Photo (right) is a close-up of the male flowers and photo (left below) is a close-up of the female flowers. Hard to believe that these flowers belong to the same plant.

I grow my Catasetums in a west facing pool cage in the same light conditions and my Cattleyas. They are growing in plastic pots in sphagnum (because of the size and weight, I often set the plastic pots inside clay pots for greater stability—as is the situation in the first photo above. The sphagnum is kept moist and Nutricote is sprinkled on the tops of the pots to provide extra fertilizer during the growing season. So if you have space for large, deciduous plants, and don't mind picking up big dead leaves when they fall off, give some Catsetums a try. You will like them, I am sure. Oh yes—there has been no messing with the names—Catasetums are Catasetum!! Contributed by Dick Pippen
